Professorship In Human Performance And Training In Sports (W2)

The Institute of Sport Science at the University of Münster (Germany) invites applications and nominations for the permanent position of a Professorship in the area of human performance analysis and enhancement in sports.

The candidate should possess experiences connecting to the sub-disciplines of sport psychology and movement science. Possible themes in research could be directed towards expertise in high level sports, or motor learning, or attention and perception, or basic neurological principles of moving and learning.

The successful candidate will have a clear empirical-analytical orientation, especially in experiment-oriented research and the use of advanced statistical methods.

Teaching obligations will be 9 hours per week.

A doctoral degree in a relevant area for this professorship (cp. HFG NRW, § 36), preferably in the area of sport science, is required. Other requirements include a strong record in research, a visible international orientation, publications in international peer reviewed academic journals, successful grant applications (particularly from the German Research Foundation (DFG)) and teaching and administrative experience at the university level.

Responsibilities include developing and maintaining a strong independent research program with interdisciplinary collaborations in particular with the department of sport psychology as well as the department of movement science that merit extramural funding and publishing in high-impact scholarly journals.

Experience in teaching in the field of sport sciences is necessary. Courses of studies are offered in the area of teacher programs at the Institute of Sport Science. Experience in teaching students pursuing a Bachelor or Master of Education is preferred.

Applications of women are specially invited. In the case of similar qualification, competence and specific achievements, women will be considered on preferential terms within the framework of legal possibilities. Handicapped candidates with equivalent qualifications will be given preference.

Applications should be received before March 12th, 2010, to receive full consideration; review of applications will follow in 2010.

To apply, send a CV, a cover letter describing research and teaching interests, and three sample publications (only journal papers) via postal services to the Dean of the faculty:

An den Dekan des Fachbereichs Psychologie und Sportwissenschaft
Prof. Dr. Bernd Strauß
